November 17, 2012
Goldwurm Auditorium
Course Description

Our course is designed to provide the practicing clinician, both generalists and allergists, with updates on the diagnosis and management of food allergies. The didactic lecture component, geared for both generalists and allergists, will focus on the different types of food allergies, identification and treatment of anaphylaxis, and potential treatments currently under investigation for food allergy. In addition, we will have break-out interactive workshops, with separate tracks specific for generalists and allergists. For the generalists, the workshop topic will address the role of food allergy in atopic dermatitis. For the allergists, the workshop will focus on oral food challenges in the office setting. Our goal is to provide a unique, interactive course that elucidates the scientific advances which support current clinical practice guidelines for food allergy.

Who Should Attend

Pediatricians, family practice physicians, internal medicine physicians, and allergy & immunology specialists. Other health professionals include NPs, RNs, fellows, residents, and medical students.

Learning Objectives

- Accurately diagnose and manage food allergies so that proper diets are instituted
- Diagnose anaphylaxis so that proper treatment can be provided in a timely manner
- Develop management plans for food allergic children to minimize risk of allergic reactions
