Course Description:

This elective is designed for those students who have had some prior exposure to otolaryngology and seek more advanced training. The students act as junior house officers while participating in all scheduled conferences, specialty and subspecialty clinics, and teaching rounds. The students also participate in surgery and assist with patient care. During the month, each student will get exposure to the full spectrum of otolaryngology, and will have the opportunity to be involved with the decision-making aspects of specialty care. Towards the end of rotation, each student will give a brief presentation on a case or topic of their choice.
