I was on a call shift, and the attending stepped out for a brief moment just when an acute situation arose. I wasn't 100% sure how to handle the situation, and was not sure the attending would be back in time so I messaged our Residency Group Chat and within one minute at least 15 people responded to me with advice and encouragement, one of the chiefs called me on the phone and walked me through what to do, a resident in the area actually came up to the inpatient unit to check on the situation, and the attending called me as soon as he got back to the work room (and proceeded to apologize profusely for not being reachable).
